Prof. Helen Andow receives Icon of Integrity Award from Abdulmalik Zakari of ZTCA

The Deputy Vice Chancellor, Strategy, Innovation and Service Delivery of Kaduna State University, Professor Helen Afang Andow, has renewed her advocacy for the fight against corruption, describing integrity as a critical pathway to Nigeria's greatness.

Professor Andow, the first female Professor of Entrepreneurship Management from Northern Nigeria, said corruption has eaten deeply into the fabric of society and continues to undermine national development.

She stated this while receiving the "Icon of Integrity" Award conferred on her by the Zero Tolerance for Corruption Association (ZTCA) during a brief ceremony at Kaduna State University.

The university scholar stressed that while society must unite in combating corruption, people should remain conscious of the ultimate accountability before God for their actions on earth.

Professor Andow expressed appreciation to the association for finding her worthy of the recognition and pledged to continue demonstrating exemplary leadership and service to humanity.

Several university officials who spoke at the event described the honour as well deserved. They included the Registrar, Samira Balarabe, Esq.; the Administrator of Kafanchan Campus, Professor Hauwa'u Evelyn Yusuf; Deputy Provost College of Communication, Management and Social Sciences Professor Rahilahtu Ahmad Muhammad; and Dr. Theophilus Anyio of the Department of Educational Foundations.

Speaking on behalf of the association, Ambassador Abdulmalik Zakari said Professor Andow was selected for the award in recognition of her unwavering commitment to integrity, anti-corruption advocacy and humanitarian service to society.
